Tokyo Celebrates 3 Entries in World's 50 Best Restaurants 2025

Tokyo has once again cemented its place on the global culinary map with a strong showing in the World's 50 Best Restaurants 2025 list, announced on June 19 in Turin, Italy. Following its earlier success in Asia's 50 Best Restaurants, where it secured nine entries, the city now boasts three restaurants in the global ranking.

Leading the Tokyo contingent is Sézanne, which climbed to an impressive 7th place. Under the guidance of British chef Daniel Calvert, the restaurant is celebrated for its refined, technique-driven French cuisine that showcases seasonal ingredients from across Japan.

Also making the list is Narisawa, which made a notable comeback in 21st place. Known for its innovative and environmentally conscious approach, Narisawa continues to be a pioneer in modern Japanese dining.

Rounding out Tokyo's trio is Florilège, now located in Azabudai Hills, which secured 36th place. Its creative French-Japanese fusion has earned it a loyal following and critical acclaim.

These recognitions further solidify Tokyo's status as a world-class dining destination, reflecting the city's dynamic blend of tradition, innovation, and culinary excellence.
